

Custodial Parent to Confirm or Deny Remarriage or Cohabiting

The Office of Recovery Services (ORS) is currently collecting spousal support on the child support case listed above. According to information that has been received by ORS in regard to the case listed above, you may be remarried or cohabiting. As defined in Utah Code 81-4-501(2) "'Cohabit' means to live together, or to reside together on a regular basis, in the same residence and in a relationship of a romantic or sexual nature."

State law found in Utah Code 81-4-505 requires that in order to collect spousal support, the custodial parent may not be remarried or cohabiting with another person, or may not have cohabited with another person, since the entry of the spousal support order.

If you are remarried or cohabiting with another person, or have previously cohabited with another person, since the entry of the spousal support order, ORS will not continue to collect and enforce current or past-due spousal support.

Please read and complete each question for the case listed above. If you are receiving spousal support payments and are remarried or cohabiting, or have previously cohabited, you may stop receiving payment; however, if you are owed arrears, the arrears may continue to be collected based upon the date of remarriage or when cohabiting began.
